Transit Services of Frederick County Wins National Award for Outstanding Public Transportation

FREDERICK, Md. - Transit Services of Frederick County has been awarded the 2024 Community Transportation Association of America's (CTAA) Community Transportation System of the Year - Large System award. This prestigious national honor recognizes Transit for providing innovative, responsive, and accessible public transportation that meets the diverse needs of the Frederick community.

"I am incredibly proud of our Transit team," Frederick County Executive Jessica Fitzwater said. "They consistently work with the community continually to ensure Transit routes and schedules best serve our residents. This award is a testament to their professionalism and dedication."

This CTAA award recognizes transit systems of over 50,000 residents in urban areas that demonstrate creativity in serving their communities, actively collaborate with other services, help accomplish community goals, build public-private partnerships, and provide transportation alternatives accessible to all.

"I am very honored to accept this award on behalf of the entire staff at Transit Services of Frederick County," said Transit's Division Director, Roman Steichen. "Although this award recognizes us for our numerous achievements, we remain committed to continuing improvements in customer service, reliability, and expanded services for our riders."

By embracing innovation and striving for excellence, Transit Services has succeeded in providing Frederick County with transportation choices that connect people to jobs, services, and opportunities. This national recognition validates the hard work of Transit's staff and leadership. It also motivates them to continue improving and expanding service for residents, visitors, and employees across Frederick County.
